

Amanda McMahon – Senior Associate

Amanda McMahon works with clients primarily focused on addressing the opioid epidemic and advancing women's reproductive health. In this role, she leads policy and regulatory analyses and monitors and assesses developments impacting access to healthcare services at the federal and state levels. Amanda represents clients at Congressional and stakeholder briefings, authors policy and regulatory summaries, manages engagements and relationships between clients and Congressional offices. She also manages media relations on behalf of clients, including issuing advisories and connecting with journalists.

Additionally, Amanda leads Pyxis Partners health policy series, where she oversees research on pressing healthcare policy issues. Amanda previously worked as a Health Policy Advocacy Intern for the firm and currently manages the firm's internship program. She has prior experience working as a research assistant at the University of South Florida where her research focused on maternal and child health, specifically safe infant sleep.

Amanda joined Pyxis Partners because of the firm's important advocacy work on issues like reproductive rights and the opioid epidemic. She values having a positive impact on the health and well-being of the public and believes in the importance of keeping patients at the center of her advocacy work.

Amanda received her Master of Public Health degree from the University of South Florida. She grew up in a small town in Central Florida and loves spending time at the beach. Outside of work she also enjoys biking, hiking, and spending time with friends and family.