Noah Haines – Associate

Noah joined Pyxis Partners as a recent graduate of American University's School of Public Affairs, where he earned a BA with high honors in both Economics and Applied Political Science.

Since graduating in May of 2020, Noah has worked on the Amy McGrath for U.S. Senate campaign in Kentucky, as well as at Elevate Government Affairs in Washington, DC, tracking Congressional policy and legislative actions. At Pyxis, Noah serves as a critical member of the firm's policy team, analyzing U.S. health policy issues.

During undergraduate school, Noah worked extensively in Democratic politics, interning with Congresswoman Lisa Blunt Rochester (DE At-Large) and at the Democratic Governors Association. Noah was also the Co-Student Director of the School of Public Affairs Leadership Program, a program designed to prepare students for a career in public service. In this role, he had the opportunity to work directly with other undergraduate students at American University, and help them complete their own social actions projects in the DC Community. Noah was also an active member and intern at American University's Hillel.

Noah now resides in Washington, DC, but is originally from Wilmington, Delaware. He is an ardent Philadelphia sports fan. In his free time, Noah enjoys playing and watching sports with friends, spending time with family, and running.
